Job Fair and Career Development for U.S. Veterans, Family Members and Active Duty Military Personnel

Brooklyn, NY—October 17, 2014—City Tech’s Small Business Development Center has organized “Operation Transition Freedom,” a free job fair and educational event for Active Duty Military Personnel and U.S. Veterans and their family members on October 28th at historic Fort Hamilton’s Armed Forces Reserve Center, 212 General Lee Avenue, Brooklyn, from 10am to 3pm.

Operation Transition Freedom is the most comprehensive employment and career day in the New York City area. Active Duty Military Personnel and Veterans and their family members will have the opportunity to enhance their career-building skills and meet one-on-one with employers.

Career transition professionals and training specialists in small business development will be at the job fair to help participants:

- Look for the right career move/transition after leaving the service
- Improve networking skills in order to land that job
- Learn about starting a small business
- Access services that are available to support transition out of the military

If you are an employer, there is still time to sign up to participate in this special event. The pool of highly desirable, employable veterans has never been deeper. Industries of every specialty need highly talented, reliable and proven candidates. Hiring a veteran provides stability and maturity, which contribute to an improved retention rate. This event will be an ideal opportunity for you to meet our nation’s heroes as well as many talented family members of our veterans!

For more information, contact Robert Piechota, Director of City Tech’s Small Business Development Center at 718-797-0187 or rpiechota@citytech.cuny.edu.
